Deborah Brown: The Bushwick Paintings

Open weekends through May 22, Storefront, 16 Wilson Ave. (at Noll St.), Brooklyn, 646-361-8512; 1-6, Free. Painter Deborah Brown has found inspiration in the industrial neighborhood where she keeps her studio—enough to create an entire show of work based on Bushwick. And while there are no pieces featuring out-of place health food stores or awkward late-night cab rides when you realize that if you had to escape you wouldn't know how to get home, the scenes are lovely. The Bottom Line: Of all the Brooklyn neighborhoods to find beauty in, Bushwick is a tough one. Go see the work of a lady who's done it and done it well.
